Support the arts through Village concerts

To the Editor:

I have been working on setting up a jazz concert series in Roslindale Square beginning Friday, September 19th at 7:30 p.m.

My motive for working on this concert series comes from my desire to see good music in Boston's neighborhoods, particularly in Roslindale, and to make a small contribution to the cultural and economic development of the neighborhood.

This series is a collaboration between the Roslindale Main Streets organization, which has been leading the area's economic revitalization for many years, and the Roslindale Congregational Church which wants to do more to help the community.

Everyone working on these concerts sees having arts in the neighborhood as an important piece of building a lively evening scene in Roslindale Square. The arts can also help in drawing people from Roslindale and other areas to visit Roslindale Square, eat in its restaurants, and shop in its new and traditional stores.

I hope you will be able to attend the next concert on Friday, Oct. 17, or the one on Nov. 21, both at the church at 25 Cummings Highway.

Thanks.
